An ugly Christmas jacket is any jacket with themed Christmas that can be considered in bad taste, vine, or gaudy. The general consensus is that more embellishments -tinsel, moose, Santa straps, candy canes, elves, presents, etc—uglier jackets. It's hard to tell who invented the first ugly Christmas jacket. In fact, we can assume that ugly sweaters are designed with the original intention of being fashionable. This is only because of the ever-changing fashion trends that the jacket once deemed acceptable is now considered ugly. As a costume item, ugly sweaters were often featured in status comedies in the 1980s. They were mostly cardinals, buttoned from the front. The Christmas theme arrived around the same time, with the first mass-produced Christmas dress, also made under the name Jingle Bell Jacket during the 1980s. While no one may want to take credit for ugly clothes, this wacky kind of holiday cheer has become a widespread festive tradition. The city of Vancouver claims to be the birthplace of an ugly jacket party after hosting an event in 2002. Every year since then, the original ugly Christmas sweater party has been held in the Thmodoor ballroom, where the dress code ensures an ugly sweater affair. Chris Boyd and Jordan Birch, co-founders of the annual Ugly Jacket Party of the Thodore, have even trademarked the word ugly Christmas sweater and ugly Christmas sweater party. To really get into the holiday spirit, the party is also in favor of raising money for the Make-A-Wish Foundation of Canada, which is granting wishes to children with life-threatening illnesses. The jacket is a kind of knitted top, and knitted dresses have been around much longer than the infamous Christmas jacket. Knitted It is created through the process of using needles to ring or knot yarn together to form a piece of fabric. Unfortunately, since knitting doesn't require a large piece of equipment like knitting, it's hard to trace the exact date of non-Christmas knitted sweater clothing. Instead historians have been forced to rely on the remains of the knitted clothing left. The first examples of the two-needle form of knitting that we are familiar with today are egyptian Coptic socks and the whole Egyptian that date back to the 10th year. They were made of white and blue cotton, and there were prominent symbolic patterns called woven fear. Fast forward to the 17th century and we saw another development in knitted clothing. Cardigan's jacket was named after James Thomas Brodneil, the seventh Earl of Cardigan and the military captain who led his soldiers to Death Valley on charges of the Light Brigade. Brunel's soldiers were equipped with knitted military jackets, known as cardigans. Who would have thought that the innovations of ancient Egyptians and British military uniforms led to a cheerful gaudy form of holiday cheer? Encourage?
